Deploying a new WMS can be an arduous undertaking, but @Logistics Reply reckons it has come up with the solution. SideUp Reply is based on the company's Click WMS product, but is provided on a software-as-a-service platform. It provides full WMS functionality and support for printers, radio frequency, and voice recognition, all delivered via the web, and as there are no hardware or software upgrade or obsolescence issues, users will always be on the latest version of the SideUp software, supporting operating system and database environment. Plus, as SideUp Reply is offered on an all inclusive pay-as-you-go model based on the users and functions accessed, there are no hidden costs. @Logistics Reply will be holding a business card draw for Reply-branded goodies such as computer bags, rugby shirts and golf balls for supply chain improvement.
