EMIR REFIT: UPI

UPI Field Conditional Chain

A particular condition arises when the field Venue of Execution is populated with the MIC code of a third country organized trading platform. In this case, if the product has an ISIN code, the UPI is still not required. Otherwise, if the product does not have an ISIN code, the UPI field is Optional

ANNA DSB - UPI User Types

ANNA DSB offers 7 different user types to navigate the UPI service. Each user type has different costs (1 free; 6 with annual fee) and gives access to different services and information. The choice will strictly depend on the business needs of the FC and NFC counterparties and a cost-benefit analysis is useful. Reply's team will support you to select the most appropriate ANNA DSB user type

UNIQUE PRODUCT IDENTIFIER

What is it?

The Unique Product Identifier (UPI) code is designed to uniquely identify the product of an OTC derivative that has to be reported to a TR.

When will you have to start reporting it?

The UPI code will be required starting from 29 April 2024, the application date of the new technical standard RTS/ITS for transaction reporting.

How do you get it?

Users can obtain the UPI code by browsing the ANNA DSB web service, designated by the Financial Stability Board as the sole UPI service provider.

UPI product definitions

For each OTC product of the following asset classes, the UPI service provides a list of attributes to uniquely identify that product:
